Census Workers Working Way Toward City

Three crews of census workers started on the outside borders of Crawford County on Monday, March 26, and are working their way toward the city of Grayling, said Art Thayer, head of census operations in Crawford County. The crews started in the harder areas to cover in Frederic, South Branch, and Beaver Creek townships. Thayer said the city residences will be easier to count than the rural places and he expects to finish with the city around the first of May.

Thayer said everyone should have received the census short form in the mail by now. Census workers should pick up the short forms by May 1. If your census form has not been picked by May 1, you should call Jerry Morford, Gravling City Manager, (348-2131), and he will notify the census workers.

Besides picking up short forms, census workers will be asking many residents to answer questions on the long census form. The census workers will fill out the long form with the information you give them. Thayer said you should know the total you paid for property taxes in 1989, total electric costs, heating costs, water costs (city residents only), and total income by each person. Information on individuals is kept confidential for 72 years. Only totals are released. Individual census information is even kept confidential from the IRS, FBI, and Social Thayer said census workers will be wearing a U.S. Census badge with their name on it. He cautioned residents not to talk to anyone claiming to be a census worker without the badge.

Solid Construction Helps Contain Chimney Fire

No one was injured early Monday morning, April 2, when the chimney at the Richard Rasmussen residence, located in the North Park Subdivision off Roberts Road, overheated.

Firefighters from the Grayling City & Township Fire Dept, responded to the call at 1:43 a.m. and discovered the chimney to be burning very hot. They quickly controlled the fire. Because of the solid construction of the chimney, the fire did not spread into the walls or the roof of the house. Damage was contained to the chimney

The home was occupied at the time of the fire.

County Entering Fire Season

Now that the snow is almost gone, Crawford County will enter into forest fire season. Although May is the worst month for fires in Crawford County, April usually signals the start of the forest fire season.

The Grayling DNR field office is issuing permits for burning brush and leaves. (Call 348-6371.) Building materials, treated lumber, and other trash can not be burned and must be disposed at a landfill.

The DNR office will be open weekends beginning April 1 to call for burning permits,

Completing I-75 Exchange Could Take Years

It sounded so simple, "Just build a southbound entrance and in his letter. He said Grayling is the only community in the state northbound exit to and from I-75 on North Down River Road," but the word from the Michigan Department of Transportation ism and military traffic as factors in this fluctuation. (MDOT) is that the project is neither simple nor inexpensive. The cost of the project was estimated in excess of $4 million dollars and will take six to eight years to complete if it ever receives approval.

THE PROBLEM

William Hartwig, MDOT representative, told Crawford a traffic problem for the downtown and south business loop. He said MDOT establishes its priority list based, in part, on potential and estimated daily traffic.

George Langen, MDOT district engineer from Alpena, stated that the last traffic count on North Down River Road was taken in 1985 and reported 1750 vehicles per day. It was speculated that with the relocation of the MATES facility to its North Down River Road site, traffic could have increased an additional 2000 vehicles per day.

Hanson said the new entrance and exit ramps had the potential of producing several thousand more cars per day from I-75 and wondered if North Down River Road should be Hartwig said any work on the site would be based on a standard 20-year traffic projection.

COST ESTIMATES

Cost estimates for the North Down River Road project are not limited to new construction and land acquisition expenses, but must also include the cost of bringing the current exchange to federal construction standards.

Hartwig said this could mean widening the existing ramps

Local State Police Lab Helps Bust Auto Thieves

"Michigan is the only state in the union where auto theft is decreasing," stated Colonel R. T. Davis, Michigan State Police Director. "The word is beginning to spread that AFIS is on the Colonel Davis was referring to the state's new high-tech Automated Fingerprint Identification System (AFIS) that was credited with breaking up a major theft ring that reached from Toledo to the Machinac Bridge. Two of the thefts involved stolen new cars and new car parts from Ogemaw and Roscommon counties.

Colonel Davis, other Michigan State Police officials, and officers from local and area police agencies met at the Michigan State Police Forensics Laboratory in Grayling last Thursday, March 29, for a news conference where they discussed the system's crime fighting abilities.

The auto theft investigation began last August when a 1990 Dodge Caravan and new car parts valued at $10,000 were stolen from a West Branch car dealership in Ogemaw County. The following day, Roscommon County Sheriff's deputies investigated the theft of a 1989 Chevy Suburban and new car parts from Don Nester's dealership in Roscommon. Although investigators had no suspects from either theft, fingerprints found at both locations were sent to the Michigan State Police Crime Lab at Grayling, which is equipped with an AFIS terminal. Both stolen vehicles were later recovered in Detroit,

These tanks were brought from Europe where they were used for troop training exercises. Three employees from the Grayling Mobilization And Training Equipment Site (MATES) facility and eight guardsmen from Ohio went to Europe in January and early February, 1990, to inspect the vehicles and accept them for the 107th. The remaining 33 tanks will be arriving in Grayling in mid-April.

Forty-three of the tanks will stay in Grayling and 23 will be shipped to Ohio. Because the M1 tank is a specialized, technical item of equipment, only certain units (the 107th CAV at Camp Grayling) will be permitted to train in the tanks.

The M1 tanks, which were designed in 1980 and built by General Dynamics, will replace the M48A5 tanks, which were built in the early 1950's and have been declared surplus by the defense department.

"With 43 M1's staying in Grayling and 57 M48A5's being shipped out," said MAJ Jerold Foehl, Public Affairs Officer for Camp Grayling, "we are actually reducing the number of tanks at Camp Grayling by 14."

Comparing the two tanks, the M1 and the M48A5 tanks both are equipped with 105MM guns and fire fully cased ammunition. Each is able to carry a four man crew, but that is where the similarity ends. The M1 has a low silhouette, making it harder to see and consequently, harder to hit. It has a 1500 horsepower turbine engine that is able to accelerate from 0 to 20 mph in seven seconds. The tank's top speed is 45 mph compared to 23 mph for the M48A5. It is equipped with automatic transmission and Halon fire suppression for the

> MAJ Foehl said the M1 has better fuel economy than the M48A5, getting a little better than 1.6 miles per gallon on good roads, allowing it to travel 310 miles before it has to stop for a fill up, which can take a few minutes, because it is also equipped with a 500 gallon diesel fuel tank.

Cost per tank is $1,645,697.

Ammunition fired by the M1 at Camp Grayling will be inert and unexploding. MAJ Foehl explained that the gun makes a considerable amount of noise when it is fired but the ammunition only "thuds" upon impact. He said this is different from artillery fire, which makes a considerable noise when fired and again when the projectile hits its target.

"The M1 will fire the same ammunition that the older tanks fired," stated MAJ Foehl. "It is equipped with a lock-on sighting system that will adjust itself while the tank continues to move, assuring a first round hit."

MAJ Foehl said the turbine engine has a whistling sound, different from the older diesel tanks, but like all tanks, they still

MAJ Foehl said MATES' mechanics are trained to receive, store, issue and repair both wheeled and expenses for the court's Quiet Room. Judge Hunter tracked combat vehicles.

Congratulations To Cast And to H.T. Productions

To the Editor,

In response to the letters written regarding the play "Two by Two." We would like to congratulate the entire cast and H.T. Productions on a very entertaining evening. Of course - we went to see a local production of a broadway play - we did not go to church.

A broadway production usually has a little innuendo and its humor is not always meant for children. But, as an

Let's Talk About It

If you are a retirce you should belong to the American Association of Retired People better known as A.A.R.P. If you are wondering why the elderly now seem to be getting benefits that were unheard of a few years ago, such as the Meals on Wheels and meals at the Senior Citizen Center, it was not because the government suddenly decided to begin programs for the elderly. No, it was the raw political power of the elderly banded together under the A.A.R.P. In politics it is clout that gets things done. When the A.A.R.P. got big enough to have that clout things began to happen. Politicians that had been ignoring the needs of the elderly began to listen and act on those needs. Numbers translate into potential votes and votes are a politician's life blood. If you are now enjoying the benefits of A.A.R.P.'s lobbying efforts, your name belongs on their membership list. The dues are only five dollars per year and well worth it.

We have a tocal chapter of the A.A.R.P. here in Crawford County that needs you to help them carry out their community projects and programs. Their agenda for those projects is wide open and your ideas and input would be welcome. Dues for the local chapter are one dollar a year and again well worth it. Come on, join in their efforts both nationally and locally to make life more pleasant and rewarding for all.

The front page of the Avalanche on March 22 carried two stories about the Guard and local business interests. One was about A.C.T. (AuSable Conservation Trust). Who are these people and who do they represent? Where do they get authority to ask anyone to sign any agreements? I know they do not represent the majority of the citizens of Crawford County. I guess it would be nice if everyone moved out of this area and the country reverted back to wilderness except for their property.

The people of this area have learned to live with the National Guard and the majority consider them good neighbors now. They offer employment to a lot of people and our local economy is very dependent upon their continued operation. The local companies are also very important to the continuing prosperity of this area. I think we all agree that the environment should be protected and I think that everyone should respect it. But I also feel that if people are to continue to live in this area they must have some means of earning a living. Not everyone in the area is retired and living on pensions.

The AMAC continues to be against just about every thing connected with the Guard in any way. Again I ask, who do they represent and how many are residents of Crawford County?

Majority Need To Make Themselves Known

Letter to the Editor:

A person gets the impression when reading the newspapers and viewing television that three organizations in this community who oppose the We heard some new voices military and major employers that we hope to hear again. represent the majority of all

It appears to me that in order to correct this misimpression, All in all - we laughed a lot those who support the major - and left the "theater" with a employers including the National Guard from any state need to make themselves known in much the same manner as the small minority of oppositionists.

First of all, a non-profit corporation could be established. It could be named something like "Pro Economic Growth" so that its initials could spell PEG.

Leaders of that group could then write press releases that would demonstrate the local support. These would be sent to all local and downstate media where the vocal minority has seriously damaged the tourist trade. A public rally should be called in support of employers where individuals would be asked to speak out about the true feeling of the citizenry. Of course, the press should be invited to attend. Press releases could also be written about the contributions that the various employers have made to the community over and above the fact that they put food on the table of many families. I refer for instance to the Weyerhaeuser Foundation and the contributions they have made to the local schools and other worthy causes. Similarly the National Guard has been responsible for work on many community projects such as the fish hatchery and museum.

is being circulated in support of the employers and the proposed full page ad with the names of those who signed is an excellent start but it really has no long lasting impres-

The petition that currently and to continuously remind visitors where the support really lies, the newly formed corporation, armed with contributions, could have designed a front license plate with wording showing the support that these employers well deserve.

To make a proposed organization work, however, it will need volunteers and contributors. It will need an executive director type of individual, an attorney to set up the incorporation articles and keep the group on the legal path, a person who would be willing to serve as treasurer, writers, rally organizers, poster makers, persons with downstate connections so that the group can get some favorable press for a change and lots of grass roots telephone callers, etc.

If the response to this letter is Rah! Rah!, We support you and that is all, don't bother.

To further support that ad What is really needed are individuals who will get behind the organization with work and not simply cheer it on. In short, a person who will contact us and ask what do you want me to do. Am I mistaken about the majority support? Is there enough interest in the community to get this operation going, keep it running and alert downstate people to the fact that this is a nice community that carries with it room for the military to roam, industry to operate and yet leave plenty of that federal and state property to recreate at one's "heart's content."

Perhaps if interested citizens could call me at 348-5657 or write to R 1 Box 154, Frederic, MI 49733, and provide their name, address and phone number, some sort of organizational meeting can be arranged.

With all the changes in the past few years in telephones, new areas of proper usage have opened up. For instance, should you allow someone to hand you a cordless telephone while you're sitting at the dinner table during a meal? Or, what do you do if your child opens the door and hands you the cordless phone while you're in the bathroom?

"It's for you," the sweet little child says, just trying to be helpful. Another situation occurs when you're talking to someone and he says "just a minute, I have another call." I suppose it's okay to wait a minute while he checks to see if it is an emergency call. But way too often people will take the second call and spend five minutes with the second call while the first caller is on hold.

That doesn't seem right. Of course, the people who mess this up are usually the second callers. Even if you tell them you are talking to someone else on the other line, they usually say "This will just take a minute," and launch into a conservation that takes five minutes.

Answering machines seem to cause a lot of anguish for some people as well. How many times have you heard this message left on a machine?

"This is _____, I hate talking on these machines." Sometimes the people owning the answering machine leave that message as well: "You reached the home of ___. You probably hate using one of these darn machines as much as I do, but we're not home right now so if you want to leave a message wait for the beep."

I sometimes wonder why they use the answering machine if they don't like it. Maybe it was a Christmas present and they had to hook it up or the person who gave it to them would know they weren't using it.

I like some of the excuses you hear from people who pick up the phone as you're leaving a message on the answering machine.

"Oh, we just walked in the door" used to be the most common one but people have kind of wom that out. Now when people really do walk through the door and pick up the phone as a message is being left, they have to say "Honest, I just got home. Really, believe me."

I think it's just fine to screen calls by using the answering machine. If it's an emergency call, you can pick it up right away. You almost have to screen calls at home these days because of the number of sales pitches you receive by telephone calls.

Companies who sell by phone have ruined a good thing. Too many people are calling trying to sell something over the phone. The most annoying ones to me are the ones who talk non-stop for the opening two minutes. They often don't let you know it's strictly a sales call for those entire two minutes of breathless talking.

Some callers are polite enough — they don't treat you like a jerk or a cheapskate when you say you're not interested. Others won't take no for an answer, and what else does that leave you with except to say "no thank you" one last final time as you hang up?

Some of these investment firm callers sound incredulous when I tell them they're wasting their time calling

"No, I don't have an extra $5,000 in my wallet right now I'd like to invest with someone who just called me off a phone list."

"You don't have any extra money you want to invest?" For God sakes, if I did have any extra money to invest I wouldn't wait around for someone from a firm out of who knows where to call me.

And how about those callers who think they're the most important person around. "Who's this?" They demand to know after you answer the phone.

I know folks who just hang up when someone calls them and says "who's this." Can't say that I blame them.

There are too many weird people around. It's been common courtesy for decades now for the person doing the calling to identify himself or herself first before asking who the person answering the phone is.

By the way, how do you like the businesses who let you stand there in person and wait while they answer the phone? Makes you want to take a toy phone in with you, make it ring, and say here, answer this phone and wait on

Portable phones, answering machines, car phones, and new technology create new situations to handle every week. Some things don't change fast enough, however. With all the additional access to phone lines, we still haven't figured out how to eliminate the scourge of modern man — games of phone tag. Instead of becoming less frequent, this frustrating game seems to be spreading more and more. Answering machines, answering services, and call forwarding are probably adding to the possibilities of keeping a game of phone tag

Down here at the Avalanche, we've thought of keeping track of the longest game of phone tag. It gets complicated sometimes, however, trying to categorize the games. What happens if someone goes away on vacation in the middle of a game of phone tag? Do you get to add the days to the total number of days the two people were unable to reach each other by phone?

Or, how about when you finally reach someone (for example, a DNR official) after three days of missing each other and leaving messages, and you find out that isn't who you need to talk to anyway? Then you spend another two days playing phone tag with the next-higher-up official. Should this count for a five-day total game?

Aw, who cares. I have to go anyway. There's someone on the phone.

America's problems are good ones

THE CHANGING FACE of the world is creating new problems for the United States, and there is no agreement yet among the nation's leaders about how to go about handling these new problems.

That's the overriding conclusion after a week in Washington attending the annual government affairs conference of the National Newspaper Association — an annual opportunity for smalltown newspaper folks to meet with top government officials and to ponder the really big

Speaker after speaker — from President George Bush on down — pointed to the changing face of Europe due to the rejection of communism and the emergence of democratic principles as forcing new decisions by our country.

But they all agreed with the assessment of Henry Kissinger, former Secretary of State: "These are good problems we have."

THE PEACE DIVIDED is at the core of much of the domestic controversy. Now that international tensions have eased, the U.S. should not have to pay as much attention to military matters; without an enemy, what need is there of heavy investment in arms? And with a lessened military load, more money should be available in the federal budget for other things. That's the dividend of relative peace.

It is the "other things" which are causing some of the disagreement... along with a continuing debate on how much military strength is enough.

Everyone in Washington seems to have a program to spend whatever is available — and maybe even funds which are not so available.

Everyone wants America's military strength to be adequate — but what is adequate? And how much does adequacy cost?

MR. BUSH TOLD the editors and publishers that the nation needs first class schools and first class education for our young. He also talked about an economic "growth dividend", and pointed out, among other things, that a cut in the capital gains tax would provide economic incentive and help create more jobs.

Other administration spokespersons — such as Treasury Secy. Nicholas Brady and Roger Porter, assistant to the president for economic and domestic policy --- echoed these ideas.

But from the other side of the political aisle, leaders were not so sure. Speaker Tom Foley, for example, argued about the "fairness" of a capital gains tax cut, and questioned the plan's economic impact. Mr. Foley, citing congressional studies, said it would cost about $12 billion; Mr. Brady, citing treasury studies, said it would gain about $12 billion. That's quite a swing... and that's one reason the capital gains tax cut creates such controversy.

To a small town newspaper writer, it seems the movers and shakers should at least be able to agree on the tax cut's impact, and then go on to argue about equity and desirability.

REPRESENTING OTHER interests, other speakers pushed their programs. Defense Secy. Dick Chency, admitting that military spending can be reduced, warned about going too far.

William Bennett, director of the office of national drug control policy, talked about strengthening schools and neighborhoods to battle drugs. Mr. Bennett, a former secretary of education, said he has "moved from the American dream to the American nightmare... and they are related."

HUD Secy. Jack Kemp, upbeat as always, even though his job now is facing problems of poverty and the underclass, exuded optimism. He talked of giving the poor a stake in the community... property is the key, he said. He talked of sweat equity and renovation and bootstraps... of "tapping the entrepreneurial spirit., to incentivise the system... give people hope". It is the same long-standing Kemp economic message of individualism, tailored to his new job.

Henry Kissinger, the elder statesman of the world, provided historical twists to interpreting events of today. A "strange aspect" of 1989's "great triumph of democracy and free enterprise," said Mr. Kissinger, is that it "faces us with a new world... for which we are not emotionally prepared... our ideological enemy has, in a way, collapsed."

OTHER SPEAKERS on the formal program included Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, who discussed emerging dangers to our global environment; Lawrence S. Eagleburger, deputy secretary of state, who predicted if a unified Germany is linked to NATO and the European economic community it will prove to be "an instrument for peace"; Lauro F. Cavazos, secretary of education, who emphasized the importance of maintaining local control of schools; Marlin Fitzwater, presidential press secretary, who, describing his job for the smalltown press, said he briefs the president twice a day; John Sununu, presidential chief of staff, who quipped that his main job was to "make sure the President is having fun": and Rep. Frank McCloskey of Indiana.

With such a lineup, why Rep. Frank McCloskey, a selfdescribed back bencher in the Washington area?

Well, Mr. McCloskey is chairman of the House's postal operation and services committee, which deals with the U.S. Postal Service.

Small town newspapers just happen to be one of the biggest users of the postal system, to deliver their products. Hometown newspapers are vitally concerned about postal service, and therefore intensely interested in the thoughts of Rep. McCloskey.

It is good for small town newspaper people to delve into the national arena and ponder the wisdom of such as George Bush and Henry Kissinger and Tom Foley, That's uplifting and broadening. But they cannot neglect the postal service and Rep. McCloskey. That's practical.

and the reconstruction of the existing bridge over 1-75.

By the time the MDOT and the federal government approves, designs, and purchases right-of-way land, the project could take eight years before construction is completed. Hartwig explained that the federal government contributes 90 percent of the funding for interstate projects and has 90 percent of the say in how it spends its money. The state then pays the remaining ten percent.

Hartwig told Grayling officials that if the community could come up with some matching funds or purchase the necessary right-of-way property, the state and federal government would look at this favorably when prioritizing upcoming projects. He said a realistic approach would be a matching funds proposal financed through a special assessment project. However, he said that even if the project was fully funded by the local community, the project would still take at least five years to complete based on the research necessary.

Land acquisition would include several residential properties on the southwest side of I-75 and at least one commercial Continued from Page 1 property on the northwest side of 1-75.

Chamber director, Deborah Allen, said the Chamber will be sponsoring a meeting sometime in April to explore the possibility of participating in some type of revenue sharing program to encourage the completion of the North Down River Road/ 1-75 exchange.

Hartwig said the military aspect could play an important role in expediting the project, but that the federal government gives the department of transportation $300,000,000 in annual funding and they will not give more for this project.

Hartwig said the ten year highway program is updated every two years and that 1991 is the first date the North Down River Road project can be added to the program. Even then, he said the project may not make the program because of other demands on available dollars. Meanwhile, the cost of the project continues to increase three percent of the total cost per Using AFIS to search fingerprint files, investigators successfully matched the fingerprints found at both crime scenes with those of Altoro Rudolph Mobley of Detroit. Arrest warrants were issued by Ogemaw and Roscommon County prosecutors for Mobley. The suspect was found, already in the custody of Jackson County officials on similar auto theft charges. Also implicated in the operation were several other suspects who have not yet been arrested. Their identities have not been released.

Investigators believe Mobley and his partners are involved in a theft ring that reaches from Toledo to the Mackinac Bridge. The theft ring is believed to be responsible for stealing more than $400,000 in vehicles and parts over a two year period.

The new Automated Fingerprint Identification System has the capability to store, track and retrieve fingerprints and permits investigators to search all fingerprint records on file within 24-hours. Currently there are 800,000 fingerprint records entered into the system with 100,000 more being added. Previously to manually search all existing prints on file with Central Records Division would have taken 72 years.

AFIS was introduced last fall by Governor James Blanchard and State Police Director Colonel R. T. Davis. There are 13 State Police terminals in the downstate area and two in northern Michigan, one is in Grayling and the other is in Marquette. AFIS terminals are also located in eight metropolitan police

"This is a classic example of combining new technology and the cooperation of law enforcement agencies to solve crime in Michigan," stated Davis. "Without AFIS, we would still be looking to break this ring.

'I think this arrest sends a strong message to criminals," he continued. "Fingerprints left at the scene of a crime are kept in a computer that doesn't forget."

The $22 million system has been operational since October.

4-H Chatterbox

By Dawn Dandy

This is an article put in the paper for kids and it was not brought to the attention of the kids, or if so, nobody cared to make a simple phone call. Too bad we have lowered ourselves to only doing something if there is a reward. This is in reference to the last article, March 22, 1990. "When did 4-H officially start?" The answer was: 1908 with "Corn Clubs." It was initiated by the U. S. D. A. to teach modern farming methods to young people so they would teach their parents in order to increase crop production. It worked and in 1917 the 4-H Youth Prográm was born.

4-H is now the largest coeducational youth organization in the world with a form of 4-H in 82-plus countries. In case you have forgotten will tell you in the form of our pledge. Some psychologists look for causes of wandering by observing what is happening immediately before the patient takes off. Some psychologists believe that wanderers are running away from an intolerable present reality (such as living among strangers in a nursing home), and others see it as a feeling of being lost (and a need to seek the familiar, protected feeling of earlier happier childhood times at home). Keeping Healthy

Don't Skip Breakfast Mom's advice is still good. Breakfast gives your body fuel for the day. Eating breakfast increases your metabolic rate so that your body burns calories more efficiently throughout the day. Also, breakfast eaters have better concentration and tend to snack less. Breakfast should supply from onefourth to one-third of the calories for the entire day and should include foods that provide protein, carbohydrates and some fat. Good choices include milk, cheese, fruits, juices, whole grain breads and cereals.

We all need to eat carbohydrates, fat, protein, vitamins and minerals every day for good health. It's really an easy task, if you cat a variety of foods in moderation from four food groups-milk, meat, fruit-vegetables and grain. And, to practice moderation, learn to recognize an appropriate portion, so you're not overeating from any one food group.

Driving Costs Increase 8%

After two years of doubledigit increases, the cost of owning and operating a typical new car rose 7.8 percent compared to last year, AAA Michigan reports.

Laughter Good for the Body

When we laugh, muscles are activated. When we stop laughing, these muscles relax. Since muscle tension magnifies pain, many people with arthritis, rheumatism and other painful conditions benefit greatly from a healthy dose of laughter. Many headache sufferers feel the same relief.

Resource Review

By Bruce Patrick. Conservation Oficer

Spring renewal is not really tied to a calendar date, but April Lis about as close as we can get. Several things hinge on that date, and many more occur this time of year.

All hunting and fishing hcenses expire the end of March with new ones required now. A small game hunting license is not required for turkey hunting this spring for the first time. A valid turkey permit is required, plus a passbook for identification purposes. A passbook can be purchased without buying a license.

Remember, a trout stamp is required to take or attempt to take trout or salmon. If you go trout fishing be sure to get a trout stamp with your license.

The revised Off Road Vehicle law goes into effect April 1. Helmets and eye protection are required, no one under 16. is allowed to operate a 3 Take Me Home... wheeler and those from 12 16 must have direct adult supervision and safety training to operate a 4 wheeler. These are a few of the new regulations.

Our fire season has started early this year with the rapid $\frac{8}{2} snow melt. Serious wildfire danger could easily develop over the next several weeks. Be sure to get a permit before burning and be careful.

This is also spring cleaning time. Please dispose of all trash and debris properly. We don't need any more junk scattered around our woods.

BORN TO BE A MOTHER

I saw a young couple on the street today The young lady was just beginning to show There was no way she could keep it secret For her face was all aglow

The young man was full of concern For this young lady that bore his heir Like she was made of egg shell china He showed his concern and care

As I watched that loving couple The thought occurred to me That to be born of such a loving couple Just how lucky that child would be

That child would be born to love By parents that I know will care Even though it was still unborn You could see love already there

That young lady was born to be a mother Her eyes showing her awe at the miracle of birth I wish all babies could be so lucky When they arrive here on this earth

I am very sure the young man too Because of all the concern he had Will be the kind of loving father That the baby will call Dad

I hope and pray that all goes well That you have a healthy daughter or son For I know that a lot of love awaits And you really don't care which one

About your Social Security

The Social Security program pays benefits to the children of retired or disabled people receiving Social Security benefits. Benefits can also be paid to children of workers who died. Any child under 18 may be eligible for benefits. And a child over 18 may get benefits if he or she is disabled and the disability began in childhood -- before the age of 22.

A common concern among parents with disabled children is whether there will be enough money for them throughout their lives. The Social Security and supplemental security income (SSI) programs can do much to lessen this concern. These two programs can assure some economic security to disabled children of all ages.

Although there are differences between the programs, both pay monthly eash benefits to disabled people. And someone who receives Social Security or SSI will usually be eligible for Medicare or Medicaid, that will help pay the costs of health care ex-before age 18. Benefits can start at any age since entitleor retirement. For example, to get SSI checks. suppose John Smith, who has a 40-year-old developmentally disabled daughter fiving with him, is planning to retire. chances are his daughter would be able to collect benefits when he retires. She probably could also get benefits if he died or became disabled.

The SSI program is somewhat different from Social Security. It pays monthly benefits to disabled people with limited income and resources. The age at which the disability started has no bearing. Disabled people of any age who qualify --- young or old — can received SSI benefits. A disabled child under 18,

Animal Care Tip

For the safety of your pet and other motorists, do not carry your dog unrestrained in the bed of a pickup truck. The Animal Protection Institute of America warns that unrestrained pets usually dogs, which have no way to grip and hold — die every day in America because their owners don't apply common sense. The API says, "Slow down and stop pickup deaths."

restlessness and questing. Peace . . . without stillness Doesn't that tell us something about our own quest in the world God made? Peace without stillness is one of the supreme longings of mankind. It seems to happen when every thing or person realizes his mission and pursues it. This week you will have a precious opportunity to join others at the church or synagogue of your choice. That's where folks are seeking . . . and finding . . . their mission in the world God made.
